THE GLOVES OF CREMORNE.

A Place Where Gold Was Thrown Away on Derby Night—Thames Tunnel.

Then, just across the river, you have Woolwich gardens—a sort of modified Cremorne. "Cremorne" I hear some one exclaim, with a sort of wasn't-that-a-dreadful-kind-of-a-place air stealing athwart his shocked features. That depended exactly upon how you took it. Of a Sunday afternoon no more innocent place for "outing" even a deacon could have found. A beautiful garden, with fantastic grottoes, miniature lakes, cooling fountains and rustic arbors, where you could regale yourself on unlimited supplies of water bread and butter, periwinkles and shrimps—a cockney Englishman's delight—with tea or lemonade if you preferred it. Of course, like the world over, something stronger was to be obtained if required, but non-intoxicating drinks were the beverages mostly partaken of at Cremorne on a Sabbath afternoon. The different shows, of course, were all closed, not even a hand organ being allowed to disturb the day's sanctity.

Good, respectable people were to be met there on Sundays. On such occasions, however, the upper-tendency were wont to ignore Cremorne. But gone are the glories of Cremorne, where gold was recklessly squandered amid the glitter of its fascinations. Derby night! Ah! what a night that used to be for the gardens. Half a crown admission and—packed. Winners of the Derby heedlessly flinging away their day's gains. Soas of England's nobility hobnobbing with jockeys and the charmers of the demi-monde. Millions of jewel-like lights illuminating the scene and flashing their rainbow hues upon the shimmer of silk and satin, costly diamonds and sparkling eyes; champagne corks popping; waiters hurrying to and fro; a swirl of dancers to the band's rhythmic measure; the boom, boom of a large brass drum, and the angry snorts of the elephants as they parade through the grounds preparatory to their performance. Rustic bridges spanning miniature cascades led away from the kaleidoscope-like revelry to some moonlit bit of fairy scenery that was delightful in its refreshing beauty, and only when the music's softened strains were wafted by some passing zephyr toward you did you realize the nearness of Cremorne's flash and glitter.

I have noticed that the people away from home invariably go to the places that the mere mention of in their native town would cause their respectable hairs to stand on end. Now there is the Thames tunnel, a resort of undoubted respectability, yet I cannot say that I ever enjoyed its intervals. There is too much suggestiveness of rheumatism about its shiny walls, down which the water trickles in tiny streams. And then the vendors at its serpentine booths are so apt to be afflicted with the influenza and it is not pleasant to trade with a party given to the snuffles, and whose goods emit a clammy odor. Yet if you are "doing" London, this long-drawn-out tunnel of dampness should be inspected, it being the only one of its kind, I believe.—London Cor. Mail and Express.

American Millionaires' Homes.
To Englishmen it is a matter of astonishment that so few Americans of wealth seem to appreciate the pleasures of a country life. With the exception of a few places on the Hudson river, there are no large residences which rise above the rank of villas. This is the more extraordinary, as the number of Americans possessing an annual income of over £20,000 is very large, and would probably be found to surpass those that England could produce. It is a matter also of note that she possesses millionaires whose incomes double and treble those of the plutocracy of Great Britain.

These same men are content to spend thousands in erecting residences at Newport or Lenox, which they call "cottages," sometimes (especially in the former place) on small plots of ground, hardly an acre in extent, and overlooked by their neighbors. For these little plots of ground they have to give exorbitant prices, sometimes even as much as £2,000 an acre, while within easy distance of New York and Boston there are vast tracts of the most beautiful, mountainous, well-wooded country, which can be bought for a song. In one of the most lovely districts of New Hampshire land can be obtained for 30 shillings an acre. In many places, owing to the competition of the west, the eastern farmers are throwing up their farms and migrating westward. There being often no demand for these farms, the lands are sometimes deserted, and can be obtained almost for the asking.—Lord Brabazon in Time.

An Indispensable Branch.
Etiquette, which included conversation, making and serving tea, and posing, is an indispensable branch of female education in Japan. The youngest children are taught in all the public schools.—New York Graphic.

Nutmegs Poisonous.
The common nutmegs are poisonous in large doses. In a case which came under medical treatment, a lady had eaten a whole nutmeg and a half, which caused extreme drowsiness, then great nervous excitement, followed by subsequent depression and pain in the region of the heart. This case points to the presence of an active principle which should be investigated.—Philadelphia Call.
